Observations on the influence of Soil and Climate upon WOOL; from which is deduced a certain and easy method of improving the quality of English Clothing Wools, and preserving the health of Sheep; with hints for the management of Sheep after shearing: an enquiry into the structure, growth, and formation of wool and hair and remarks on the means by which the Spanish breed of Sheep may be made to preserve the best qualities of its fleece unchanged in different climates.

BY ROBERT BAKEWELL. With occasional Notes and Remarks, by the RIGHT HON. LORD SOMERVILLE.

[CONCLUDED.]

Such I apprehend to be the process of nature, and that this entire cessation of the accustomed secretions occasions the disease which we call the moult. This is probably a species of fever. The bird loses its cheerfulness and relish for food, and is seized with sudden shiverings. The disease continues until the old feathers fall off, when the secretions are again renewed, by which the bird is restored to health and acquires a re-

Hair is as fully and perfectly formed after it leaves the skin as the extremity of the feather in its most mature state; it appears to grow merely by the addition of new hair at the bottom, which protrudes it forward. On the contrary, feathers, and all bodies which grow and increase from interior circulation, not only grow from the upper part, but continue to enlarge in every dimension until they are full grown. The difference between the growth from the top and sides of the feather. and the elongation by mere juxta position at the bottom of the hair, appears to me clearly to indicate the different modes of their formation. It may tend to confirm the opinion I have advanced respecting the structure of hair and wool, that hair is frequently observed to split at its points into different fibres ; a division has also sometimes been seen in the hair of wool. This seems to prove that they are formed by a number of distinct long filaments uniting in one thread or hair as I have described. It is not, however, on hypothetical reasoning that I rest the proof of this opinion. I have ascertained its truth in some instances, by an examination of the hair of different animals, both with the single and compound microscope. In large hairs I have discerned a number of divisions from the root to the point. In one hair I distinctly perceived fitteen of these divisions or fibres laying parallel to each other, and in some of the fibres a further subdivision was distinguishable. Probably these subdivisions were each composed of others still smaller, which the limited power of our instruments may prevent us from discovering. If such be the structure of the hair of some animals, it is at least probable the hair of all others may have a similar confirmation; although the fibres of which they are composed may be too minute, or adhere too firmly together, to admit us to seperate or distinguish them. It were almost needless to add, that wool, whatever may be its peculiar qualities, is still the hair of sheep, and must be formed by a process of the animal economy similar to what produces the hair of all other quadrupeds. I might offer as a farther confirmation of what has been here advanced, that it may be fairly inferred that wool and hair remaining long after they are seperated from the skin without any perceptible change, that they have not been deprived of any secretions from the circulating fluids by this se-

Whether wool be composed of tubes and vessels receiving increase by constant circulation and secretion of fluids from the animal, or whether, like the silk-worm's web, it be a solid unorganized thread, composed of finer filaments, may appear a question more curious than important. But if the latter opinion be well founded, which both deductions from analogy and the minutest microscopical researches render probable, it will lead to consequences of considerable practicable utility, and teach us to bestow more care and attention on the unshorn fleece. Nature, when she produces wool. provides for it, and covers it with an oily secretion, or yolk, and thus intimates that she has confided its future defence and preservation to external applications. When, from accidental circumstances of situation, this volk is absorbed, or its copious secretion is prevented, she has given us the power of supplying the deficiency, of assisting her intentions, and improving her operations, by the application of ointments better suited to assist the effects of soil and climate. Thus by attending to the intimations of nature, man is enabled in Northern latitudes to cultivate and bring to perfection, both the animal and vegetable productions of Southern and more favoured regions.

From the New York Evening Post.

THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF. No. III.

Before the reader begins with the Extracts I think it not amiss to make a few observations respecting the nature of the evidence to be expected.

Let it be borne in mind then, that the fact now to be proved, is, that money to the amount of more than 30,000 dollars was paid to the commander in chief of the army of the United States, by the Spanish government; that this large sum was necessarily paid in silver, there being at that time no paper money in circulation in that part of the world; that it was transported in bulk more than a thousand miles, partly by land and partly by water; that, as it would have been at least very hazardous, if not impracticable, for the commander to have left his post, and gone down every year to New-Orleans to receive the money in person, it consequently became absolutely necessary to confide his secret and entrust his business to agents; that even to these agents, however, he would be cautious of commit ting himself any further than was indispensable, and of course that explicit written documents were hardly to be expected in the case. The nature of the crime, the manner of carrying it on, and the heavy and condign punishment attending detection, all would seem to forbid us to look for any thing more than evidence indeed of the fact of his actually receiving the money and the source from whence it came, but it was cely to be hoped that we should be fur nished with even that: By the confessions of those employed both by himself and the Spaniards, explained and confirmed by some of his private confidential letters, and oral confessions, the whole finally corroborated by his own self-condemning defence, the reader is not permitted to entertain one single doubt on the subject.

" Proofs of the corruption of gen. James Wilkinson, and of his connection with Aaron

" Hitherto my proofs have been presumptive, and such only as might be expected from the secret nature of the crime. I come now to tread on surer ground, and will clearly prove the payment of five different sums of money to gen. Wilkinson by the Spanish government, amounting to 34,563 dollars. I will prove negatively, that no part of this was on account of the tobacco or any other commercial speculation, [as he had alledged in his defence] and then affirmatively that they were the wages of his treason.

In 1789, he visited New-Orleans a second time, and returned by land, carrying with him a sum of about 6000 dollars in silver, loaded on two mules, and accompani nied by Mr. Philip Nolan, and preceded I believe, as far as Natchez, by Mr. Jo seph Ballinger, both of them his confidential agents, as will appear by a number of documents referred to in the course of this enquiry. Before their arrival in the American settlements, the general thought it prudent no longer to accompany his treasure. It was therefore confided to Ballinger, who carried it to his own house, while the general and his faithful Nolan rode on to Frankfort. Joseph Ballinger having fallen sick was obliged to transfer his trust to his brother John, who after some days of anxious expectation on the part of the general, arrived at Frankfort, delivered the money to Wilkinson and took his receipt, which is still in existence, and will probably be printed in an appendix to this work.-The arrival of Joseph Ballinger at his own house with the money, and the subsequent delivery of it to Wilkinson, are proved by he testimony of John Ballinger, (Note No. 5.) His being accompanied by Nolan is added, and the other circumstances corroborated by the letter of Evan Jones, (No. 6.)

* This and the subsequent figures refer to corresponding figures in the appendix. 1 think Mr. Clark unfortunate in having thrown all his evidence into an appendix instead of embodying it with the argument: it is too volumnious to be reprinted here, but I venture to inform my readers that I have carefully examined it, and found it to support completely every fact for which it is adduced.

From 1789 to 1794, if any remittances ere made they have eluded detection.-But in that year we have the clearest evidence that a sum of 6000 dollars was sent to be delivered to him, and though it was lost on the route, yet from a complaint in one of his letters we should judge that the shipment was on his account and risk.

Finding the means of transmitting the money difficult, or the agents unfaithful, or the suspicions of Wayne awakened, or from some other cause, the general found it necessary to dispatch a special messenger to receive the subsidy. He pitched upon Mr. Owens, a gentleman who had been driven by disappointment from society, and who was pursued by poverty in his retreat. His wants induced him to undertake the mission, and from his character Wilkinson knew that he might rely on his fidelity. He deserved a better employment and a better fate: for having received the sum of 6000 dollars he was sent up the river in a public galley to the mouth of the Ohio, he there embarked in a perogue with six Spanish sailors, furnished by the commandant of the galley to go up the Ohio, and was in a few days afterwards robbed and murdered by his crew. The whole of this transaction is circumstantially related by Mons. Francois Langlois, now an inhabitant of this territory, then the commander of the galley in which Owens was conveyed (No. 7.) To corroborate his testimony are added extracts of two letters from the baron de Carondelet to Mr. Langlois relative to this transaction and to the capture of the murderers. One or two of them were tried for this crime, and the trial gave publicity to the object of Owen's voyage, which, by the affidavit of Mr. Bouligny (a planter of this province formerly adjutant major of the Louisiana regiment, now a member of the territorial legislature) appears to have been very publicly known, and the general's character duly appreciated. (See No. 8.)

Grieved for the loss of his money, and alarmed lest the trial of the murderers in the United States should lead to disagreeable investigations, general Wilkinson determined to use every exertion to apprehend and deliver them to the Spanish government. One named Vexerano was taken, tried and condemned at New-Orleans. Another escaped, but was afterwards taken near the same place, and underwent the same fate. One who had not participated in the crime, immediately after it was committed, left his companions and fled to New Madrid. The other three after wandering some time in Kentucky, were taken & confined, but were enlisted by lieut. Smith, and as there was no evidence against them, they were suffered to join the army; but general Wayne hearing their history, ordered them to be discharged and reprimanded the officer for enlisting them; after this, Wilkinson by means which are not known procured them to be transferred to Fort Washington, where he engaged Mr. Cs. Smith, of Kentucky, to convey them to New Madrid. They were chained and put on board a boat for that purpose, but on his way down Sunth attempted to pass Fort Massac at night, but was stopped by major Doyle, who commanded there, and who not knowing by what authority Wilkinson sent men in irons to a Spanish commandant, refused to let them proceed-but sent an officer with Smith to major Portal, at New Madrid, requesting to be furnished with an interpreter to examine the prisoners, and to furnish such proofs as might be necessary to convict them on their trial in the American territory. Smith bore an order, from Wilkinson on the commandant for 500 dollars, for the conveyance of the prisoners. This however was protested, but Mr. Power was sent as an interpreter to examine them. It not being the interest of the Spanish government that the affair should be investigated, no proof was sent on, and the men after some months confinement, were discharged for want of evidence. Most of the facts subsequent to the murder of Owens, are of public notoriety, the whole is detailed circumstantially in the affidavit of Mr. Powers (No. 9.) and the names of the persons having an agency in the business being mentioned, reference may be had to them in case the charge is more seriously investigated. In the same year to divide the risk another remittance was made by sea amounting to 6334 dollars, and entrusted to Mr. Jos. Collins, another of the general's confidential agents. On this point it must be confessed that the proof is not such as would be received in a court of justice, but it carries with it internal evidence of its truth, and may be rendered certain whenever government are seriously disposed to ascertain the truth of those charges.

Mr. Collins lives at Pascagoula in the Spanish territory. He was applied to for an affidavit stating his agency in the business, but refused through fear of offending the officers of his government, to whom a request of Wilkinson he had already a declaration under oath of the whole tra action. Though taken evidently for purpose of favoring Wilkinson, this ded tion would throw light on the subjection it will never appear; for Collins has d ed that, as far as it went it contains the The gentleman who called on Colli tained from him verbally a statement following facts-That he was sent h kinson in the year 1794, with Owens in Orleans, with a sealed packet for gon Carondelet. That in consequence orders contained in this letter 6000 on were delivered to Owens, and 6333 to his (Collins) with which he embarked at the Bayou St. John's, went to Charleston, and in August, 1795, delivered his charge general Wilkinson at Cincinnation the O hio. He asked for a receipt. This was refused; but he (Wilkinson) called on Mr. John Brown, of Kentucky, who happened to be there, to witness that he had sent his accounts with Collins, and that he one him nothing. These facts are stated in letter from general Adair to me, (No. 1 and the evidence is corroborated by of the receipt which Collins gare for it money, to the contedor of a panish ten tory, in these words: " Received from G bert Leonard, 6333 de Vars, for the use general James Willinson, which I promi to deliver to him, the risk of the sea &c. excepted." It may be objected the this is only heresay testimony. It is but it may be rendered authentic who ever general Wilkinson shall please publish the affidavit taken at his quest before governor Folch, or whenever our government takes measures to m pel the attendance of witnesses. In the mean time, it is corroborated by the fer that Collins was the known agent of Wil kinson; by the positive testimony while has been already detailed in that part of the story which relates to the division of the sum between him and Owens; and by following statements: First, the depositi of Mr. Miller, a very respectable and inte ligent planter on the Red river, who in h deposition (No. 11) states that he saw Co lins at the time of his embarkation from ! Orleans, who had then just returned fr Ohio; that he saw the money put on boar that Collins mentioned the sum and told h it was for Wilkinson, and that by a ve extraordinary favor of government it was suffered to be embarked openly. Secondly, by the certificate of captain Sterrett, late of the U. S. army, who status that Collins ga him, at another period, the most minut details of the difficulties he had to encoun ter in the transportation of this sum. (Se No. 12.) Here is then positive testimon of the delivery of this sum to an agent of gen. Wilkinson, and the strongest circum stantial presumptive evidence of its being

The evidence on which the next payment rests, would, I confess, be weak in any o ther case. It is that of the general himself In a letter dated August 7, 1795, to get Adair, (No. 13.) he cays, "of 6950 dolls received for me in New Orleans, 1740 00ly have reached my hand, this independent of poor Owen's loss. The whole of this last sum is not lost, but is not within my control, and will not be for 4 or 6 months."

Here then is a fourth payment from New Orleans confessed, which does not agree ! amount or circumstance with either of the others. The first sum it will be remember ed, was carried up by himself six years be fore: the second is confided to Owens, and is expressly excepted; the third was given to Collins, was a different amount, and cam safely to his hands. This, then, was a 40 and an additional payment; but how cam the general so communicative? The forme part of the letter gives the reason. He ha just risen from "cool Madeira," and the truth which is in wine had for once correct ed the habitual falsity of his language,

The enemy had availed himself extremewell of the advantage of the ground to over his passage. The extensive villages (Essling and Aspern, mostly composed of rick houses, and encircled all round by neans of earth, resembled two bastions, bereen which a double line of natural trenchintended to draw off the water, served the curtain, & afforded every security to be colums passing from the Isle of Lobau. Issling had a granary furnished with looppoles, and whose three stories afforded room for several hundred men, while Aspern was provided with a strong churchvard. The left side of the latter village borders on an arm of the Danube. Both villages had a safe communication with the shy ground near the Danube, from which he enemy had it constantly in his power to lispatch, unseen, fresh reinforcements. The sle of Lobau served at once as a place of arms and a tete de-pont, a bridge head for the bridge, in the rear across the main arm

The enemy with the divisions of generals Molitor, Boudet, Nansonty, Legrand, Es-Lasalle and Ferrand, under the shals Massena and Lasnes, as well as ushal Bessieres, together with the guards the Wurtemberg, Hesse, Darmstadt and aden auxiliaries, had already left this poa, and was directing his march towards Hirahstetten, when the first Austrian adsauced guards met him.

If it be at all permitted in war, to inge favorable presentiments, it was cerly excusable so to do at that great moment, when on the 21st of May, exactly at reive o'clock, the columns began to put emselves in motion for the attack-A general enthusiasm had taken possession of the toops—joyful war songs, accompanied by Turkish music, resounded through the air, and were interrupted by shouts of " Long our emperor! long live the archduke urles!" whenever the imperial guard apared, who had placed himself at the head the second column. Every breast pantwith anxious desire and high confidence ter the decisive moment, and the finest cather favored the awful scene.

BOSTON, Sept. 2.

From Spain. Since our last, we have been favored with alencia papers to June 30; from which he following articles are translated:

VALENCIA, June 30. The Junta of Observation and Defence Molina in Arragon, has communicated our Superior Provincial Junta, under date of the 27th current, among other in-ormation the following: Our battalion with two cannon, and a cavalry, set off for the great road of ladrid, to obstruct excursions of the enehy's soldiers from Guadalaxara, made for of plundering the people of the his movement of our troops has people of the territory of Siguenza, province of Guadalaxara, who had en degraded by the tyrannical domination the French, have risen, and refused obetence to the orders of the French governi his written orders have been publicly In the market at Siguenza, by the city A portion of our armed countrya have proceeded to Rio Frio, and have ady taken 52 carriages loaded with wool, ding to France. Our battalion is encouraging the insurrection which increases among the neighboring peasantry, and will soon be such as no power of the troops of the tyrant of France can subdue."

Since the battle of Belchite [near Sarragossa, at which Blake was defeated, June 18, a few deserters from the French have joined us, and some have also entered Gerona. The brave Somatenes continue to intercept the enemy's convoys and destroy the guards. The Spanish garrison of Gerona, and the inhabitants, have performed spirited sallies, and reaped much glory. All the artillery and mortars are constantly employed to defend the place.

Gen. Venegas has established his headquarters at Monzanuries. The army of Estremadura, is numerous, well disciplined, and has excellent cavalry. The army of La Mancha is not so numerous. The army of reserve consists of the Portuguese and English. It is reported that Venegas intends to attempt to penetrate to Aranjuez.

TARRAGONA, June 22. By various accounts from the detachments of armed peasantry and soldiers from Figueras and Ampurdan, we learn, that on the 5th, 6th, and 7th inst. between S.Lorenzo de la Muga and Darnius, a corps of the enemy was attacked, and 100 men killed; and our loss was 1 killed and three wounded, in other attacks the enemy lost 110. A convoy of waggons from Figueras to Gerona, with ammunition for the French army, was attacked, and 6 of the waggons taken. On the 10th, 20 French waggons were taken and 20 prisoners made, 4 French soldiers were killed.

MANRESA, June 20. The French continue the siege of Gerona and the inhabitants defend it bravely. successful sortie was made on the 8th, in which 200 were killed and as many wound-

A letter from Malaga, dated June 21, says-" Business is rather dull, except to the Spanish colonies, which is brisk. There are no staves here at present, nor a single fish in the town. A cargo of staves might be sold at present for 140 to 150 dollars per M. and fish at 5 dollars per quintal on board. The latter will no doubt be fully supplied by the English, who have a superior quality and pay less duties."

The following highly valuable Medicines.

Price 3 dollars per bottle. Dr. Jebb's Nature's Restorative A BALSAMIC CORDIAL.

THIS cordial so justly celebrated throughout Great-Britain and the continent of Eu rope, for its superior efficacy in the curing all disorders excited by nervous irritability, as well as in complaints of complete debility, whether arising from pregularities of living long continued residence in warm climates intemperate pursuits of excessive pleasure, or that destructive habit of inconsiderate youth which brings on so prematurely the infirmiest of old age.

In removing pulmonary affections, asthmas and all disorders of the lungs, it is the most powerful remedy ever yet found, and the relief it has afforded even in the last stage of consumptions, is without a parallel; with regard to its efficacy in this baneful, and unfortunately the prevailing disorder in this country (consumption) its superiority is such as to have supplanted every other medicine.

Those who in advanced life feel the conse quences of youthful excess, will find themselves restored to health and strength, and all those melancholy symptoms removed, which are the general effects of such causes.

In short, animated by the uniform success this invaluable cordial has experienced in Europe, the thousands it has renovated, when bending under the pressure of nervous, consumptive or hypochondriacal disorders (many ttested proofs of which from eminently distinguished persons in this quarter of the globe, are now in the possession of the proprietor here, some few of which are herein published have determined the introduction of it into this continent, where its efficacies must soon become so prized as to make it considered a beneficent remedy not to be dispensed with bly those who are anxious to preserve or acquire their health.

The chief ingredient of this cordial is a pant whose rare and precious salutary virtues were well known to the Arabians during the 8th and 9th centuries, when that people shone conspicuous over all the nations of the world for their learning and skill in eradicating baueful diseases incident to the human frame, joining the residence of Rawleigh Colston renovating infirmity to vigor, and restoring | esq. of which about 660 acres is leased for the the sickly to sound and rosy health, and which, balance of the life of an aged man, the rest teas known at this time by their descendants, and used and experienced as the most sovereign remedy for decayed constitutions, and on it. In point of fertility it is esteemed inevery species of nervous disorders. This celebrated restorative plant has also been highly estimated for ages past, amongst the most enlightened nations of Greece, and considered by those wise inhabitants as one of the first of their blessings.

This cordial is also rich and fine in flavor most grateful to the palate, and the most en livening to the spirits of any yet offered to th public

Dr. Tiffot's celebrated Gout and Rheumatic Drops

NOTHING is of more importance that the preservation of health-this common lacep remark however is too often forgotten whilst we are active and strong-and pre vention of pain, which is superior to its cure, is not sufficiently attended to by any description of persons. Among those disorders which require the most early and unremitting effo ts to eradicate and overcome, none have a strong er claim upon our notice than the Gout, Rhea matism, Lumbago, Weakness of the Joints, Sprains, Gleets, the Stone and Gravel, the Cramp and every species of Rheumatic Pains from whatever cause they may have originated-and hence every relief which can be administered is too valuable to be forgotten .--Those persons whose avocations peculiarly expose them to colds, &c. cannot be too anxious always to possess immediate aid. Sea-faring persons, travellers, &c. ought constantly to carry with them that medicine which will counteract the unpleasans effects of their peri lous duties, and especially those pains to which their situation must expose them. To those Houses and Lots, will likewise be received who reside in or visit the West-Indies, and in payment according to such rates as may ther warm climates, they will be found upon | be agreed upon. trial to convey the most lasting service and will gradually destroy all tendency to disease in the human frame, and preserve health and vigor. Although a great variety of prescriptions have been published to cure the disorders enumerated above, none has yet equalled the GOUT AND RHEUMATIC DROPS of Dr. TISSOT, which are celebrated throughout the European continent, and whose unbounded benefits are fully authenticated by certificates already published of gentlemen so well known in America, being of the first con sequence in the state of Maryland: General Charles Ridgely, of Hampton; John Gibson, Esq. one of the directors of the Farmers' Bank of Maryland; John Macubbin, Esq. Mrs. Ma cubbin, his wife; and Mrs. Ryan, of Calton-Ample certificates and affidavits of the beneficial effects of these medicines may be seen by applying as above,

FOR SALE, The following VALUABLE PROPERTY. A TRACT OF LAND.

NONTAINING 1600 acres, more or less called and known by the name of Buff. loe Marsh, lying within 12 miles of Winches ter, in the county of Frederick, in the state of Virginia. On about 900 acres of this tract there are several very well improved farms tenanted for life or lives, the balance free of all incumbrance, including an excellent merchan, mill built with stone, the whole yieldin an annual rent of about 800 dollars. Much of this tract is very fertile, well watered, and all abundance of timber. It is generally rolling, but part of it is hilly and stoney, chiefly of lime stone. It will be laid off to suit pur-

Another tract, called Hollis's Marsh, lying in the county of Westmoreland containg about 2800 acres, bordering on the river Potomac, adjoining the Stratford estate, and the late residence of Richard Lee, esq. of Chantilly. On the estate are a number of farms and tenants at will. Part of this land is extremely fertile, and all of it as good as hte lands generally are in that part of the country. The Marsh affords excellent range for stock, and is happily situated for fish and fowls of which that river abounds, and must be a desirable estate to any person who may choose to reside in that part of the country. It will however be laid off to suit purchasers. The above lands are held by deeds of purchase duly recorded in the general court, Another tract containing 992 acres, lying in the county of Berkeley, adnanted at will. This land is situate in what is called the big bend of Potomac, and borders ferior to none in that part of the state and is heid by deed from James Marshall, esq.

Seven other tracts containing 1000 acres each, adjoining each other in the county of Mason, within a few miles of the Ohio, between the two Kanhawa's on the way ters of Sandy Creek, which runs through a considerable part of it. It religious the lands of general Washington, and the late Benjamin Harrison, jun esq. A large portion of it is rich bottom and the upland of very good quality.
